TH Mack, Sr.'s photographs from Yaoundé, Cameroon, preserve two moments from his international experiences: an encounter with Monsieur Augustine and a record of honorary membership recognition.

The first photograph shows Mack standing alongside Monsieur Augustine in an office setting. It provides a personal record of their meeting, bringing the people at the heart of the encounter into focus.

In the second photograph, Mack holds an open document in a room displaying Cameroonian national and football imagery. Paired with his description of honorary membership in Yaoundé, the image offers a keepsake of that recognition. It preserves the occasion without revealing the full story of the membership or the organization that conferred it.

Together, the photographs form a chapter in Mack’s personal history of travel and connection. Visiting another country offers opportunities to encounter different traditions, meet people, and gain perspectives through direct experience. The lasting memories often include the individuals met along the way and the moments that give a visit its personal meaning.

The encounter with Monsieur Augustine gives this chapter a name and a human connection. The honorary membership adds a distinct milestone to the account. Each deserves to be remembered on its own terms, as part of Mack’s experience in Yaoundé.
